(The Devil You Say...)

There are many devilish places in Missouri and some in our own backyard. Old Scratch has his name on property in Devil's Elbow, named for the sharp river bend loggers had to navigate down the stream right here in Pulaski County. There is also a Devil's Elbow in Butler County.

The Devil's Boot in Warren County is named for a boot-shaped cave. The Devil's Toll Gate at the foot of Taum Sauk Mountain is in Iron County.

Five Missouri counties claim to have parts of the Devil's Backbone with one nearby in Phelps County and the others found in Jackson, Oregon, Ripley and Montgomery. We find the Devil's Den in Webster County, The Devil's Icebox in Boone County. The Devil's Race-Ground in Franklin County, The Devil's Tea Table in Cape Girardeau and Miller Counties, The Devil's Wash Basins in Warren County, The Devil's Washboard in Dunklin and Wayne Counties, and The Devil's Washpan in Barry County.

The Lewis and Clark Expedition mentions The Devil's Race-Ground, a difficult rapid in Missouri, way back on May 24th, 1804. Undoubtedly you can find a Devil's Pit, Devil's Sink-Hole, Devil's Well, Devil's Stream, Devil's Creek, Devil's Fork, and Devil's Bend, too.
