

J. M. EATON,

Where can you go to see the tools owned by the last blacksmith in Swedeborg? A display of objects uncovered during LEAP class excavations of the Old Stagecoach Stop? A "war room" featuring displays and photographs of Pulaski countians from conflicts dating back to the Civil War? All these items and more are on display at the new Pulaski County Museum located inside the old Pulaski County Courthouse on the square in downtown Waynesville.

According to museum curator Steven Beattie, the Pulaski County Museum features historical items collected from area residents. Items on display include photographs, tools, records, and more that have been donated to the museum. Future displays will depend on the continued additions to the museum's collection.

The museum will be open to the public full time starting at 11 a.m., July 25 during Old Settler's Days. Special events that day include speeches from local dignitaries and a play titled, "The Trial of Eliza Black" presented by the LEAP class students. Visitors can see a mural of the Waynesville area, a past to present Waynesville diorama, a photographic collection featuring Devil's Elbow, the Pulaski County land records and law books, and the Genealogy Society Room. The Genealogy Society Room houses books for sale including Volumes One and Two of the Pulaski County History Book, Volumes One and Two of the Cemetery books, and a book on Pulaski County schools. The Fort Leonard Wood Museum plans to have a special display about Fort Leonard Wood's role in Pulaski County history.

The Pulaski County Museum will be open Tuesdays and Thursdays from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. and Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The museum will also open during Mondays following holidays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

During Old Settler's Days, door prizes will be given away to visitors to the museum. Anyone wishing to donate historical items to the museum is encouraged to contact them in the old courthouse building or write to P.O. Box 10, Waynesville, Missouri 65583. A cash donation box is set up inside the museum for monetary contributions.
