

1937 WAYNESVILLE ELEMENTARY SCHOOL STUDENTS. While too young then to be in school, Dwight Hensley is the little boy on the left in the front row. There are two girls in the back row wearing white bows in their hair. Maxine (Ballew) Farnham is the rightmost of the two. Courtesy of Maxine Farnham.

WAYNESVILLE STREET SCENE, probably late 1940's. Signs depicted on this postcard advertise various business establishments and services. From the left (the south side of the square), these include Military Supplies and Uniforms (with tailor shop and jewelry and diamond signs), Lucky 7 Cafe, Country Club beer, Western Auto Associate Store, and a roller rink. On the right is Copeland's Military Stores. In the background at the center of the scene is Rigsby's Mobil Gas Station and a tailor shop, a co-op store, and a gift shop. Courtesy of Patty Bunch.

WAYNESVILLE SPRINGS, taken by George W. Towe the year before the courthouse burned. Courtesy of Mike Jones.