

Early History of the Frisco League Tournament

By Gary Knehans

When did one of this area's most enduring and popular basketball tournaments begin? And why is the Frisco League Tournament held at the beginning of the season when participating teams have had so little practice and actual playing time?

The answers to both questions have their origins in 1957. On July 10th of that year, Frisco League superintendents of schools attended a special meeting that had been called to reorganize the conference. Lebanon had just decided to drop out of the league and join the Skyline Conference. This left only six schools in the Frisco League--Conway, Crocker, Dixon, Richland, Stoutland, and Waynesville.

A seventh school, however, had responded positively to the league's earlier call for additional membership. That school district, Licking, replaced Lebanon in the Frisco's ranks.

Attendees at the meeting elected C. E. Quesenberry as league president; Hubert Neal, vice-president, and Claris Coltin, secretary-treasurer. They also made several important decisions: League basketball competition would revert from regular round robin to double round robin. Each team would play each conference rival two times to determine the league championship. All league games would be scheduled for Friday evenings only. And most important of all, there would be a league tournament held in Waynesville the first week of December!

The superintendents gave Waynesville officials authority to invite one guest team in order to achieve the standard eight-team tournament lineup. The invited team was Plato.

And so, on December 3, 1957, the first Frisco League Tournament game took place between Waynesville and Dixon. The Tigers, seeded first in the tournament, defeated the Bulldogs 73-to-31. The second game that night resulted in a 69-to-66 victory for Licking over Conway.

Stoutland and Plato's game the following night was a wild and wooly encounter. The Eagles led going into the final quarter of the contest, but the Tigers staged a come-from-behind 57-to-48 win. The other game that night witnessed a 60-to-36 thumping of Crocker by the second-seeded Richland Bears.

In consolation encounters on Thursday, Plato and Conway emerged victorious.

Friday night's semi-final action resulted in a 75-to-51 Waynesville win over Licking. And Richland survived a tough challenge from Stoutland, winning by a slim 54-to-50 margin.

Saturday night's games began with a 62-to-60 Conway consolation trophy win over Plato. Stoutland defeated Licking 52-to-37 for a third-place finish in the tournament. Waynesville prevailed in the championship game 45-to-40 over Richland.

The Waynesville Tigers repeated as Frisco League Tournament champions in 1958, but lost to Conway 58-to-55 in overtime in the consolation trophy game in 1959, their final season in the conference.

Newburg joined the Frisco League in 1958. Conway eventually dropped out of the conference. Plato, Iberia, and Laquey became Frisco League members at a later date. After becoming state champions in 1969, the Dixon Bulldogs dropped out of the conference for a season before rejoining in time for the '70-71 season.

Incidentally, that first Frisco League Tournament championship game involving Waynesville and Richland not only was a contest between two of the best teams in the area. The Tigers and the Bears in the '57-58 were legitimate state contenders. Paced by Derrell Holiday, who averaged 28 points per outing, and Jerry Garrett, who averaged 21 points, Waynesville bested Richland three times in the regular season and posted a 28-and-4 record.

That fourth loss came in the regional tournament to none other than the Richland Bears, who advanced to win third place in state competition in the late winter of '58. The Bears top scorers were Raymond Warden, who played at the center position, and Ted Oglesby, who eventually became the varsity boys' basketball coach at Waynesville for a period of time.

In recalling the '57-58 season, Jim Bales remembers teammate Derrell Holliday as "absolutely the finest pure shooter in the area."

"He didn't shoot that

Interstate Ready-Mix, Inc.

Full Service Plant

Quality Concrete Mixes Per Your Specifications

13900 Hwy Z St. Robert, MO.

573-336-4222

Fax # 573-336-4559

Sands Farm & Home

"Your One-Stop Feed/Pet Supply Center"

- Feed • Pet Supplies
- Lawn & Garden • Premium Pet Food
- Health Products • Hanging Baskets
- Flower Plants • Seeds
- Landscaping Material
- Bird Feeders • Nectar • Bird Houses

107 E. 6th., Rolla, Mo.

573-364-5607

Pop Sutton-The Soldier's Friend

By Gary Knehans

He was county sheriff when the only public hanging took place in Pulaski County. But, rather than establishing a legacy of being a stern executor of the law, an officer more eager to break bones than to give someone a break, Dotson "Pop" Sutton lived a life of boundless generosity and goodheartedness that was directed especially toward young soldiers and their families during the early days of Fort Leonard Wood. He became known as the "soldier's friend."

This distinction was all the more remarkable because often it was Sutton's duty as a law officer to curtail the activities of the more exuberant among the men in uniform. The veteran lawman did not enjoy having to take the rowdier soldiers into custody. He understood that loneliness and the sobering prospect of being shipped overseas to fight in World War II prompted the young men to act the way they did. So, many times "Pop" would just counsel a soldier in a fatherly way and make sure the man reached the barracks safely after his brush with the law.

Sutton had many opportunities to befriend soldiers, as he was on the police force at Fort Leonard Wood during its period of construction and activation. When the army had its own men trained for military police duties, "Pop" became a deputy sheriff of Pulaski County.

"Some of the soldiers made very pitiful remarks to me when they would tell me good bye, knowing that they would not see me again," he said in 1948. "One night, while on my beat on the west side of the bridge, a soldier came to me and said, 'I was looking for you. I wanted to tell you good bye. I will be shipped out in the morning, but my wife and little boy will be here for thirty days. Take good care of them.'"

"He nervously said, 'May God bless you,' and walked away. I never saw him again.

"I had lots of soldiers tell me good bye and say, 'I want you to pray for me.' I met some soldiers in Waynesville one night; and they said to me, 'Pop, we want to tell you good bye. We will never see you again.' I said, 'Why?' They said, 'We are going to be shipped out tomorrow morning.' I said, 'Well, when the war is over, you may come back here. And they said, 'No. If we live to get through, we will all go home, but we wanted to talk with you before we started back to our barracks tonight. We know we are going across, and we may die, but we wanted to tell you that if we do, we will have a warm feeling toward you when we go down for the way you have always treated us when we were in Waynesville.

"I met a soldier at the west end of the bridge in Waynesville one morning, and he said, 'Can I talk to you without making you mad?' I said, 'Yes, sir, I may not approve of what you say, but I will not get mad.' He said, 'I got drunk last night and spent all my money. Will you give me money to get a sandwich and a cup of coffee, or go with me and get it. I have had no breakfast.' I said, 'I will go with you, and I want you to tell me why you told the truth.' He said, 'I always tell the truth.' I went in the restaurant and ordered his breakfast. He said, 'No, just a sandwich and coffee. I don't want this to cost you much.'"

At one time, "Pop" had a collection of more than 100 photographs taken of himself in the company of Fort Leonard Wood soldiers. The photo that accompanies this article was one of them.

His law enforcement career began in 1900, when he was elected constable of Roubidoux township. He then served four years as Pulaski County Sheriff, riding his favorite horse, "Midnight," all over the county in the line of duty.

Pop Sutton posing with Sergeant Lawrence L. Sutton of Kentucky. Photo courtesy of Benny Doolin.

Continued from page 35

much," he says, "but averaged 28 points a game."

Bales believes Holiday would have averaged thirtysome points per game if the three-point field goal had existed then, or if Holiday had shot the ball more often. The Tiger cager once scored 54 points in the first three quarters of a game against Dixon before being pulled out to sit on the bench.

The Tiger coach in 1958-59 was Kenny Foster. His players included Derrell Holiday, Larry George, Jerry Garrett, David Wells, Bill Morgan, Jim Bales, Frank Graves, Ogden DeWitt, Eugene Hammack, Howard Solki, and Dan Kipp.

By the way, the superintendents who established the Frisco League Tournament could not have foreseen the beginning-of-the-season status the event has now attained. Before the Missouri State High School Association effected a rule change some twenty years ago, high school basketball teams were allowed to begin official practice in early October and to play their first games in early November. With the rule change, official practice usually is allowed to begin around the first of November and the first games are allowed to be scheduled about three weeks later. For some Frisco League teams, their first game in the league tournament is their first game of the season.